The Power of Building Community

Kendra Bauer believes that fostering a sense of community is the foundation of meaningful education. Whether guiding students through challenging literature, leading outdoor experiences, or supporting student activism, she prioritizes trust and connection. In her keynote, she will share personal experiences—both the triumphs and challenges—demonstrating how strong relationships empower young people and create lasting change.

Speaker: Kendra Bauer, MA, M.Ed.

Kendra Bauer has been an educator in the Lowell High School English Department for 22 years, teaching courses on race, gender, and identity in literature, as well as Early College and Dual Enrollment programs. She is also an adjunct professor at UMass Lowell and Middlesex Community College. Passionate about student engagement beyond the classroom, Kendra leads the Lowell High Outdoor Adventures Club and advises Students Making Change, a student-led anti-racist initiative. Originally from South Carolina, she holds degrees from Brandeis University, Boston College, and Middlebury College. Outside of work, she enjoys traveling and adventuring with her wife and four children.
